DOUBLE FEATURE: Bucket of Blood & Little Shop of Horrors

Saturday, July 13th @ 10:00 PM

Full disclosure, the theater warms up in the summertime. All shows will start at 10:00 PM, doors at 9:00 PM with organ overture at 9:30 PM, to help alleviate some of the heat. We're also going to crank up some fans to help as well, so it might get a little noisy. Throw on your shorts and tank tops and come down to the Senate Theater where things are bound to get HOT, SWEATY, and WEIRD this Summer!

All screenings are $5. All films are "Not Rated".

Check out the Hot, Sweaty and Weird Trailer!

A Bucket of Blood* (1959, 1 hour 6 minutes)

Walter Paisley, nerdy busboy at a Bohemian café, is jealous of the talent (and popularity) of its various artistic regulars. But after accidentally killing his landlady's cat and covering the body in plaster to hide the evidence, he is acclaimed as a brilliant sculptor - but his new-found friends want to see more of his work. Lacking any artistic talent whatsoever, Walter has to resort to similar methods to produce new work, and soon people start mysteriously disappearing...

When the clumsy Seymour Krelboyne spoils a client's flowers, his boss, Gravis Mushnick, is ready to fire him. However Seymour tells that he has created a hybrid at home named Audrey Jr. and Mushnick decides to give him another chance. Out of the blue, the flower seems to be dying and Seymour accidentally learns that she likes blood. Seymour is upset since he does not know how he will feed the flower. When he throws a stone near a railroad track, he accidentally hits the head of a man that falls on the track and a train runs over him. Seymour brings the pieces of the man to the shop and finds that the plant likes flesh. Audrey Jr. grows and becomes the attraction of the shop. How will Seymour feed his plant?
